AGREEMENT IN EL CERRITO STREET PAVING CONTROVERSY LOOMS

Council Expected To Accept Work At Next Session

Acceptance of the street improvement in the Berkeley Country Club Terrace tract will probably be made by the council of El Cerrito at the meeting of the body next Monday according to the statement of Councilman Ernest O'Brien at the meeting Monday night. O'Brien said that the council would have the California Construction company, the contractors, put up a bond for one year to guarantee the repairing of the defective work and work omitted and that the street work would be repaired to satisfaction of the property owners before the bond would be released.

W. F. Huber, legal attorney, who appeared in behalf of some of the property owners, stated that he had two appeals in made to the council, one of them being one of arbitrary action. "Fraud because work was charged for that was not done and arbitrary action because the engineer recommended the acceptance of work not done in a workmanlike manner," Huber stated.

Richmond To Aid In Fire Prevention Week

Richmond will cooperate with other cities in the bay region and throughout the country in observance of Fire Prevention week which opens Oct. 7. It was announced by the local chamber of commerce yesterday.

The week has been officially designated by President Coolidge with the object of helping to reduce the needless losses by fire which have been growing to alarming dimensions in recent years.

Last year, according to figures received by the chamber of commerce from the United States chamber of commerce, the total fire loss of the nation was in the neighborhood of $500,000,000. The National Fire Waste council and the insurance department of the United States chamber, which are jointly conducting the nationwide Fire Prevention week, believe that through coordinated efforts much progress can be made in cutting down fire losses.

"Through the observance of Fire Prevention week Richmond will have an opportunity to benefit itself and the country as a whole in helping to show a big reduction in the fire figures for 1928, according to the chamber of commerce."

More recently she has been a director of playgrounds, department of education, Berkeley.

In addition to her social service work, Mrs. Hollingsworth is a practicing attorney, having received her degree from the University of California and having passed the state bar examinations.

Mrs. Hollingsworth will begin her duties in Richmond today taking charge of the social service work for the local chapter.

Kidnap Murderer Nearing Gallows As Appeal Fails

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—(U.P.)—A writ of error sought by William Edward Hickman from the state supreme court was denied late today thus closing one of the last avenues available to Hickman to escape hanging for the murder of Marion Parker, Los Angeles school girl.

Hickman's attorneys must now seek permission from individual members of the United States supreme court before his case can be considered by that body or secure a reprieve from the governor of California.

Unless one of the last efforts is successful, the youthful Kansas City kidnaper and slayer will go to the gallows of San Quentin penitentiary on Oct. 19. He is confined to a cell in the condemned row of the prison.

The opinion denying the writ of error was announced by Chief Justice William H. Waste after he had conferred with other members of the court. The action had been based on the contention that Hickman's constitutional rights had been violated.

The state supreme court had denied Hickman's appeal for a new trial several months ago and at that time indicated that his attorneys would not have a legal fight to carry it to the highest court of the United States.

Jerome Walsh, member of the young murderer's counsel, is in Washington, D. C. and will probably petition members of the supreme court to consider the case of his client at once.

HOOVER ON INDIVIDUALISM

It would be hard to find a finer or more succinct expression of the contrast between the aims of our form of government and those that are its most marked antitheses than has been drawn by Herbert Hoover in that paragraph of his acceptance speech which says:

"This ideal of individualism based upon equal opportunity to every citizen is the negation of socialism. It is the negation of anarchy. It is the negation of despotism. It is as if we set a race. We, through free and universal education provide the training of the runners; we give to them an equal start; we provide in the government the empire of fairness in the race. The winner is he who shows the most conscientious training, the greatest ability and the greatest character. Socialism bids all to end the race equally. It holds back the speedy to the pace of the slowest. Anarchy would provide neither training nor umpire."

Surely that one statement contains ample proof of the soundness of Mr. Hoover's convictions of government. He simply voices the doctrine under which he himself rose to brilliant success through the zealous efforts and a comprehension of the American heritage of opportunity. That was all he had at the start of life. In him we see the orphaned farm boy who has verified for the millionth or so time the truth of the idea that poverty and humble origin in this country are no barriers to the man who would reach the top. His comparison between individualism, socialism and despotism and anarchy is that of a man who has seen the practical results of all four, from one side of the world to the other. His observations have served to strengthen the robust character of his American individualism and American institutions have found in him a most courageous champion.

STATE DISPENSING

In William Hard's weekly review of national political developments, appearing in the Sunday Register, this is as interesting a sentence as any:

"Smith's proposal that state government should be permitted to engage in the sale of liquor has awakened in many southern minds the bitter controversy caused by the now discarded state dispensary system of South Carolina."

Now every one of Governor Smith's suggestions as to ways of "improving" the general situation with respect to liquor is readily identifiable as a mere proposal to repeat some sort of regulatory experiment, short of real prohibition, that has actually been tried in the past in these very United States and that was demonstrated by trial to be thoroughly unsatisfactory.

As has been pointed out before, in Iowa alone nearly every conceivable plan of dealing with liquor barring only state dispensing has been tried and found wanting.

It ought to be worth the attention of even those pro-liquor men who care not how liquor is got back so long as it be got back; that even the scheme of state dispensing has had a test in the United States, South Carolina being the state, and that it, too, was abandoned because it simply didn't work.

There is really not much need to turn to Canadian experience on this point, though Canadian experience, where state dispensing is being tried or some other form of state control that amounts to the same thing shows that it is no answer.

The real reason why prohibition came was because everything short of it was found not to work, who are so shocked by imperfect enforcement of prohibition now, and by such bad aspects of the as they can cite, and usually exaggerate, fuse to look back and consider at all what were under the experiments with legalized lling under attempted control.

Julie Says

Showing the more feminine tendency of the mode is this street frock of jersey. The dress of palmetto green jersey is trimmed with highland green crepe de chine which is a slightly darker shade. The large bow at the shoulder is looped through a composition ring. Diagonal lines are made by the crepe de chine, the pocket cuffs, belt and buttons. The vestee is of white. Every wardrobe has its jersey—one or two piece frock. It is the ideal garment for the first frosty days and other quite takes its place.

BEAUTY

Dear Miss Lane:

I always dread the warm weather because of the trouble it causes with my feet. They get swollen and red and awfully sore and tired. Do you know of any salves or ointment which will help them?—Footsore.

Rather than salves or ointments I would recommend regular and specially prepared foot baths. Let them soak in a basin of warm water to which a little borax, a pinch of soda has been added while you are sitting reading or sewing in the evening. Then when you take your bath, bathe your feet in very warm and then very cold water. This will stimulate the circulation and leave them feeling rested. Try to keep off your feet as much as possible each day and when you lie down (or sit down, for that matter) pop them up higher than the rest of your body to allow the blood to drain away from them.

Are you sure that your shoes are light and well-fitting? Heavy, ill-fitting shoes will ruin the best of feet—especially in warm weather. You can combine comfort and style without paying exorbitant prices. Be sure that your shoes support your foot without binding it.

Dear Miss Lane:

Is the use of borax in the water to keep blonde hair light, harmful? I have heard that it dries the hair and spoils its texture.

The occasional use of just a little borax will not have a deleterious effect on most blondes.

Richmond Club Hears Talk On Hoover

The first of a series of political addresses on presidential candidates was given yesterday at Richmond Club, when Mrs. D. H. F. Easton of San Francisco, prominent clubwoman and delegate to the Kansas City republican convention, spoke on Herbert Hoover.

Mrs. Easton opened her address by saying "Both political parties have selected the best man of the day to represent them. The president of the United States is also president of the American Red Cross and both candidates have done outstanding charity work."

Mrs. Easton presented to her audience four issues foremost in the present campaign: Internationalism, the 18th amendment, the McNary-Haugen bill and the Boulder Dam.

Speaking of internationalism, Mrs. Easton told of Hoover's years of war service, of his becoming inclined to meet the astute minds of the heads of Europe, and that his understanding of European ideals will be a great aid to the United States. "Internationalism is going to figure tremendously in the next few years," according to Mrs. Easton.

Discussing the 18th amendment, Mrs. Easton pointed out that 27 states of the Union have been "dry" for years, and outlined points of argument. On law enforcement, she stated that it would be impossible to enforce the law, as there are only 400 federal officers in the United States, and that the 18th amendment can be protected by education alone, just as the anti-slavery amendment was a matter of education through several generations. She gave the following quotation "Let us unite and tell the world—hands off the Constitution."

Referring to the McNary-Haugen bill, Mrs. Easton said that those who framed it, framed it in such phraseology that any president would have to veto it, that those who framed the bill do not believe in it themselves, and that it is simply the political farmer against the real farmer.

"The man who will build us a dam as big as possible," continued Mrs. Easton, "a dam as high as possible so store as much water as possible, is the man California needs for president; California needs that water."

Mrs. Easton gave the early history of Tammany, saying that George Washington was the first to call the attention of the people to the danger of Tammany. To date, Mrs. Easton said, no Tammany man has ever been elected to a national office.

Mrs. C. C. Holbrook was in charge of the program which included solos by Mrs. John Griffin, accompanied by Mrs. Myrtle Smith; and dances by little Miss Joan Blount of Berkeley, a pupil of the Carmel White school of the dance.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the afternoon by Caroline Rogerson, Mrs. R. Rodger, Mrs. James A. McCann and Mrs. J. W. Smiley.

On Thursday afternoon the ladies of the Richmond club will give an invitational bridge and whist party. Mrs. Mollie Black and Mrs. Amy Mugg will act as hostesses, and the proceeds will go toward the building fund.

This afternoon between the hours of 2 and 4:30 at the home of Dr. L. W. Wuesthoff, 5325 Zara street, the garden section of which Mrs. Wuesthoff is chairman will give a garden party and silver tea. Members and friends are invited to attend.

"THE SINGING FOOL," starring Al Jolson, in a Warner Bros. picture. Plan of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Marcus, the famous Broadway producer, takes a party of four to Blackie Joe's New York night club. Al Stone, Blackie's chief copedian and singer, is asked to sing a song with Molly, the ballad singer, and begs her to read a song he has written for her. After scornfully refusing and telling him she will never marry a water-bearer, she goes to the Marcus table and tries to ingratiate herself with the great producer. Blackie, seeing Al dejected, urges her to read the song herself to Molly. It says he can't sing a love ballad, but finally he consents. Grace, the cigarette girl, who is deeply and unselfishly in love with Al, encourages him.

the fire at his command; and his voice suddenly rose to a startling and passionate crescendo of appeal. Molly was not "stupid" as she realized that the singing man she had scorned previously was really creating a living song. Like the call of fate his full, resonant voice repeated the title, "Always"—which occurred so frequently in the ballad. She stole a look at Marcus; he was leaning forward, giving Al his rapt attention.

Al felt Molly's eyes on him the floodgates of his soul were opened, and to all intents and purposes, he was alone with her, adoring her, telling her of his love that would last—always. He thought

CHAPTER VI.

The room was filled with careless chatter as Al took his place beside the pianist, at the edge of the dance floor, to sing the heart song he had written to Molly. No one in the gay crowd seemed to notice him; no one except himself. Blackie Joe and Grace knew that the next few moments meant to him, and he knew that the girl he loved. He was plainly nervous at trying a ballad; his face went white and one hand gripped the side of the piano.

The pianist struck the opening bars and Al began the verse, haltingly but determinedly. He had located the one face he wanted to keep before his eyes throughout the song, yet some home it seemed to him her eyes grew gentle.

But the portion most deeply affected was Grace, the cleanest girl. She stood quietly leaning against the wall at the back of the group, in the semi-darkness, not one of the temptations to her eyes to trickle, and come down her pretty cheeks. Oh, what wouldn't she have given to have listened that song, in that way, to her! Everything she possessed, her life itself!

Nowhere the first time she realized with what passionate devotion she loved him. Her lovely young beam rose and fell rapidly, as if to his words, and his stinging ache that seemed to grow more intense with every word Al uttered. Dear little Grace, so loyal and so lovely, yet forced to stand aside unnoticed and see another woman, who didn't appreciate Al Stone, receive the homage that he tossed to eloquent feet. It was maddening to Grace—but there was nothing to be done about it except to go on loving him and endure the pain in his heart.

Now she saw Blackie Joe approaching. She hurriedly arose to dry her tears. Blackie saw and understood her feeling at first glance but, like the good understanding fellow he was, pretended not to notice. "Poor kid," he thought, "well, that's the way it goes." Then he turned to Grace and whispered confidentially: "Our comic's not so bad after all, is he?"

Grace looked up and forced herself to smile happily. "He's wonderful!"

Finally the last notes of the music died away—the song was ended. Al stood for a moment as if in a trance, then quickly turned and walked toward the door.

Al's song holds the guests spell-bound.

the song—Molly's. But Molly was busy talking to Marcus; she didn't even know Al was singing.

As he continued the people at the tables nearest him stopped talking and gave him their attention. Then it seemed as if they caught the merry-makers a little farther away and they, too, became silent. He was singing as he had rooms. The room was as silent as a desert night, not a crackle of applause broke the stillness. Al's chin came down on his chest; he felt he had failed and he wanted to get out of the room as quickly as possible.

He told Marcus that Molly's eyes were fixed on his recitation time. She was obviously excited, but Al thought she didn't understand and he didn't know how to explain it. He knew what it meant, but the reaction of Marcus to the never mind! Before, throwing his words about him like words.

When he finished singing and swung into the chorus the pianist whispered up to him, "Good boy, Al!" And as the pianist ran his fingers swiftly up and down the ivory keys he marveled at this singing waiter who had become a comedian up until this moment and suddenly unleashed a voice vibrating with sentimental appeal.

Al relaxed when he reached the chorus. It was the chorus that would save him. He knew it. The song was decidedly different. He saw it as a piece of work, a medium for thrilling audiences. Turmoil left Molly he almost shouted:

"That's one of the best ballads I've heard!"

In a flash Molly realized that Al had a real hit—a heart-throb number that might put him over on Broadway and make him famous. His eyes shined intensely brilliant; she was thinking of him.

As Al approached the dressing room doorway he encountered

Grace and Blackie. Swiftly he spoke:

"Now see, this 'no use'—I know you could be over a hallel. For a moment it seems to me I'm really interested, but I couldn't hold her. And not a peep from the crowd—"

"But Al stopped, dazed. From the crowd came the slow rise of applause. They had been too closely held by the music to give vent to their emotions, and now they rushed away, but now their feelings were released in a storm of applause."

astute revue producer heard the song and, although he hadn't paid much attention to it at first, now he suddenly became all interest. His hands came up in a quick gesture, demanding more from her. He whispered curtly:

"Sh-h! I want to hear this!"

It was the first time that evening he had flattered the floor show by the least bit of attention, so Molly was astonished. She followed his gaze, and, on Al, and she, too, began to listen.

He had reached every one of them and their strenuous hands were lowered. Now like a great wave of sound, they were given over to the song.

As he went about, facing them, his director post passed, and a smile creased his features. Then he saw Molly's eyes turned toward him, and he turned toward her, leading the thunderous applause.

Al March's table, Molly heard the celebrated producer say:

"That waitress is a singing fool."

He's great! And who wrote that song? I want it for my revue."

Not for a moment did Melba doubt now. The future was assured, with the great star determined to leave his song. She began to lay her plans swiftly.

"The writer wrote it," she answered. "The boy who just sang."

"The writer wrote it," repeated Marcia.

"Yes, but," Melba said, easily, "I gave him the idea."

"Oh, yes, the idea!"

N.Y. DEMOCRATS SEEK SMITH SUCCESSOR

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 1.—(U.P.)—Governor Alfred E. Smith returned to his home state today, received a warm welcome as he stepped ashore through the throngs of his city and then got down to business by holding a press conference on the fifth floor of his hotel.

While the real convention went on in the hotel room and the smoke curled upward from the governor's big cigar, the convention which most of the delegates attended got under way in the city auditorium two blocks away.

Those in the convention hall were in doubt as to who they were going to nominate to run for Smith's place as governor of New York—for that formally was to be decided in the hotel room meeting—but they listened to a real democratic speech by the "keynote," William Church O'Brien, who denounced prohibition, deplored injection of the religious issue into the national campaign, criticized Mabel Walker Willebrandt, and praised the democratic standard bearer.

After endorsing the democratic national ticket heartily, the delegates then adjourned their first session and went back to the hotel to mill about the lobby and find out who will be nominated Tuesday night.

Roosevelt Looms

Strenuous efforts were made this afternoon to get Franklin D. Roosevelt, who nominated Smith for president, to accept the gubernatorial nomination. The hotel conference eliminated a number of other prospective candidates.

In a telegram to Smith from Warm Springs, Ga., where he is now undergoing treatment, Roosevelt insisted he must confirm his previous decision not to enter the race because of the state of his health. He has turned down previous efforts to "draft" him.

Early tonight Governor Smith gave Roosevelt over long distance news that he had refused firmly to enter the race. The conference then adjourned after an all day session until after Smith's speech tonight.

There was a strong movement among the leaders after Roosevelt's to "draft" Senator Robert F. Wagner, who previously has declined suggestions for his nomination.

Smith's N. Y. Drive

Smith returned from the west to open his eastern campaign. His first concern is New York state, and the chief concern here today was to select a gubernatorial candidate who will aid his race for the presidency in this state. Smith must have his 45 votes to win, with the utmost strength he is conceded elsewhere.

O'Brien's mention of Mrs. Willebrandt brought a chorus of hisses and boos from the democratic delegates, but he when Smith mentioned her in the Milwaukee speech.

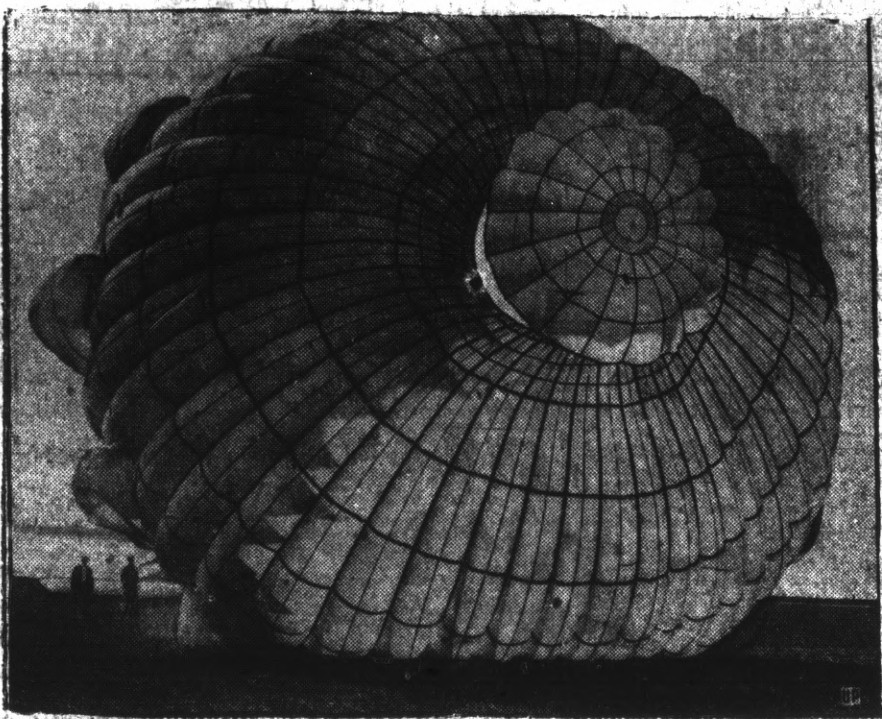

Certain bishops of the Methodist church and a United States senator, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, are appealing to the great majority of the Methodist church to act as a political body on their question," he said.

PUPILS SHOW INTEREST IN ESSAYS

Richmond high school boys and girls both in the senior and junior divisions are taking a keen interest in the essay contest inaugurated by the Parr-Richmond Terminal corporation for the best 500 word article on the subject: "The Value of the Harbor and Industrial Development of the City of Richmond."

Following announcements by Walter T. Helms, superintendent of the Richmond school department, the principals of the city's two high schools, and teachers in the English departments, a score of students immediately announced their intention of entering the contest.

Prizes Offered

Fred D. Parr, president of the Parr-Richmond Terminal corporation has offered cash prizes to the amount of $75.00 to be awarded the winners of the contest.

The first prize is $25.00, second prize $20.00, third prize $15.00, fourth prize $10.00 and fifth prize $5.00.

Announcement of the contest is appearing twice a week in each of Richmond's daily newspapers.

Rules Given

The rules provide that any senior or junior high school boy or girl may enter the contest. The articles must not be over 500 words long, written on the typewriter on one side of the paper only, with the name of the writer and address in the upper left hand corner.

The development of Richmond's waterfront means so much to the future industrial business and residential growth of Richmond that I feel the potential citizens of tomorrow, the high school students cannot fail to grasp the significance of this development and my sole purpose in offering these cash prizes is to encourage the citizens of tomorrow in taking an interest in civic affairs," said Parr today.

Year Orient

"Twenty-one days nearer the Orient and Australia than the great seaports and manufacturing centers of London, Liverpool and New York, Richmond commands the world's commerce," he continued. "The compelling advantages of rail and ship facilities, the wonderful climatic conditions existing here, the superb residential areas, California's wealth of raw materials which lies at Richmond's back door—all these advantages tend to attract the great industries of the middle-west and Eastern seaboard. One cannot think of Richmond without visioning a mighty industrial city, and a mighty important shipping point with harbor facilities exceeded by no other city on the Pacific Coast."

Prizes in the contest will be awarded on or before Dec. 20, so that the money will be in the form of Christmas gifts to the students who win.

All articles should be sent to B. S. Sanders, advertising director for the Parr-Richmond Terminal corporation, Richmond.

Will Be Published

From time to time the articles furnished by the contestants will be published in the local newspapers but this does not mean that the winning article will be among these.

A visit to the Parr-Richmond outer harbor terminal, a talk with some of the managers of the local great industrial plants may also develop ideas for the articles.

PROSPERITY OF RICHMOND AT HARBOR

With Henry Ford owning a corner lot on the Richmond Inner Harbor and with the city constructing a new facility 200 feet long, chamber of commerce leaders expressed the belief today that the city's waiting period in its industrial history is about ended and that a new era of development is about to open.

According to the best advice from Detroit, Ford will start to build early in 1929 on the 70 acres which he has acquired on the inner harbor. This industrial site is water on two sides and is in effect a harbor corner lot.

Next to Ford's projected plant is the new Parr Richmond wharf, being built jointly by Fred Parr, and the City of Richmond and extending on 32 feet of water dredged lately by the City of Richmond and the Federal government.

The city council has approved plans for dredging and improving the harbor, which will connect with the business center of Richmond with the new industrial center on the inner harbor. This work will go forward at once.

Harry M. Sanford, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said that numerous inquiries are being received for industrial sites on the waterfront and for business locations in the heart of the city and declared that Richmond is admirably situated to accommodate all comers in both fields. The inner harbor is now entirely virgin territory.

A huge new pile driver is now putting down a pile as a foundation for the new Parr Richmond wharf and the construction of the wharf will be completed early in 1929. The wharf will be about 200 feet long and will be flanked by two piers and will have 32 feet of navigable water in front of it, insuring its connection with the largest ocean going vessel.

The deal for the Ford plant was completed last year. Since then the city has completely filled the land, so that it is now dry and level and several feet above the water line. The Ford plant will sit on the huge wharf now being built by the city.

Chamber of Commerce leaders are in touch with large industrial men of the West, according to Sanford, and a number of other deals for valuable sites on the inner harbor and elsewhere will probably be closed within the next few months, he said.

Such large merchandising centers as Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck are now actively negotiating for sites and stores in the business district it was announced.

ATTENDANCE AT CHURCHES URGED

Richmond ministers and church leaders are completing arrangements for "Go to Church" Sunday, which will be observed on Oct. 7 in all Richmond churches. Various ministers will aid in bringing before the public during the week the objects of the special day of the churches. Roy H. Oberholzer, vicar of St. Edmunds church sets forth in the following article why residents of Richmond should avail themselves of the opportunities presented in the local churches.

By Rev. H. I. Oberholzer, Vicar, St. Edmunds Church

The reasons why people go to church are many and they should be for there are many reasons for going to church.

Some go to church to hear good music. The music of the church should be as good and as high class as we can possibly have. But we must always remember that the music of the church is not primarily to entertain or please our musical sense, but to be sung for the glory of God and to uplift our hearts to Him.

Some go to church to hear a good sermon. The sermon should be as good as the preacher can make it. It should appeal to our God-given reason, should show us the way to God and inspire us to go forth to live better and nobler lives.

Share Fellowship
Some go to church to meet their fellow Christians, to share fellowship with one another and to share in their common fellowship with God.

Some go to church to set a good example to their fellowmen, especially to the youth of our day. This is most laudable and a reason that many non-church people might well consider for the church is the greatest uplifting and ideal-creating institution there is.

Some go to church because they are sick in soul. They have sinned and realize it and want to seek forgiveness of God. So they go to church where they may the more easily realize the presence of God and hear Him say to their souls "Thy sins be forgiven thee; go and sin no more."

Other reasons there are no doubt but any reason is a good one that leads us to go to church and there, in common with our fellowmen, hold fellowship with God.

Real Religion
This one thing is sure. However real our religion may be, it will not last unless it has in it the desire to join in common worship of God with our fellowmen. Without this common worship, its hold upon us, its control of our desires and appetites, its deep reality will gradually fade away.

Next Sunday is "Go-to-Church Sunday," a day when every Christian is urged to start anew if you have been regular, bring one with you who has grown lax and thus, turn his face in the right direction. "Go-to-Church" twice or thrice next Sunday—go the second mile with Christ.
